I. LEARNING A FOREIGN LANGUAGE

Language learning can be enjoyable and interesting. It can open your eyes to the ways of other people in our world as well as prepare you to communicate with them. With your newly-developed skills you can open doors to avenues that will enhance your life.

In the future, the use of foreign languages in the business, social service and educational worlds is expected to increase. Many corporations are now expanding their international departments, which increases their need for people who can communicate with people in other countries. Many of these corporations now are developing businesses in Central and South America. This will increase the necessity of having bilingual people available, especially those who speak Spanish.

With the influx of immigrants coming into the United States from our southern neighbors, our social service departments need bilingual people to help immigrants establish themselves in our community. This is also true in the field of education. We need teachers to instruct the children of these immigrants and help prepare them to adjust to our society without losing their cultural identity. We also need teachers to teach Americans to communicate with people of other countries.

Answer the following questions.

1.1 What are three good reasons for learning a foreign language?

- a. _____
- b. _____
- c. _____

1.2 List three types of occupations where knowing a foreign language is helpful.

Helpful Hints for Language Learning

Here are several hints that will help you acquire a better knowledge of the Spanish language. Please read them and make them part of your study style.

A. Cognates. Words in English and Spanish with similar meaning, spelling, and pronunciation that are derived from Latin or Greek are cognates. Thousands of words are cognates in both languages. For example, some exact translations are taxi for “taxi,” and hotel for “hotel.” Then there are others which have minor spelling changes from one language to the other; for example, minuto is “minute,” información is “information,” teléfono is “telephone.” And then there are some that are evident because they have a similar word in English which may not be as common. For example, sitio is similar to “site” but means “place,” and simpático looks similar to “sympathetic” but means “nice.” Making associations with similar words will help increase your vocabulary bank in Spanish and in English.

While Spanish and English have many cognates, there are also “false cognates.” These are words that are spelled and pronounced similarly in both languages but do not have similar meanings. For example, the Spanish word flor means “flower,” not “floor.” The word ropa means “clothes,” not “rope,” and pared means “wall,” not “parade.” Therefore, don’t automatically assume that all Spanish words have a similar meaning to an English word they resemble.

B. Word Families. In many languages there are “word families.” An example of an English word family is “The baker bakes baked goods in the bakery.” The four words in bold type are all related to the verb “to bake.” The same thing happens in Spanish: “El trabajador trabaja en su trabajo.” “The worker works at his job (work).” Watch for words that have the same root. It will give you a clue as to the new word’s meaning.

C. Basic Rules. There are some basic rules that will help you with your understanding of the Spanish language and increase your success.

- 1. Sometimes good Spanish makes terrible English and good English makes terrible Spanish. This means that it is often impossible to take a sentence from one language and translate it directly, word for word, to the other.

2. Once you learn how the language works you, you will be able to increase your ability to communicate by using a good dictionary to look up new words.
3. You need to study in small amounts of time to better reinforce the new skills you are learning. It is better to spend 15 minutes a day, after your initial introduction, studying the new concept than to spend an hour “cramming” the night before a test. The more times you review, the greater your success.
4. Try to use your new vocabulary often. For example, when you learn the names of objects, look at those objects and repeat the Spanish word for that object whenever you see it. This is an additional reinforcement technique.
5. Choose a study partner with whom you can practice, especially speaking. Seize the opportunity to charlar, or chat, even if only for a minute or two. This will increase your success and confidence.
6. Do not get upset when you make mistakes. The more you practice, the fewer mistakes you will make. You can learn from the mistakes. Always try your best.
7. Remember to master the information in each book before progressing to the next. You need to build the foundation block by block to support future learning.

D. Terminology. It is best to understand the parts of speech so that when you are reading a grammar explanation you can completely comprehend it.

1. Noun – a person, place, thing, or idea; e.g., book, thought, Spain
2. Verb – an action or state of being; e.g., to walk, to be, to think
3. Adjective – a word used to describe a noun; e.g., pink, big, many
4. Adverb – a word used to describe an adjective, a verb, or another adverb; e.g., happily, nicely, very
5. Preposition – a word that indicates the relation of a noun to a verb, adjective or another noun; e.g., in, out, behind, over, under
6. Definite article – the
7. Indefinite articles – a, an, and in Spanish, some
8. Pronoun - a word that takes the place of a noun; e.g., he, him, it, they, I, me.

You will learn more words as time goes on that will help your comprehension of the workings of the language.

Look at the following Spanish words and see if you can identify the English for them. Then tell what part of speech the English words are.
